Food-PATCH is the Westchester County Food Bank. Its mission is to alleviate hunger and minimize food waste in Westchester County by soliciting, sorting, and distributing a steady supply of surplus food to Westchester’s emergency food programs to fight hunger.

Food Not Bombs
Food Not Bombs believes that society and government should value human life over material wealth. Many of the problems in the world stem from this simple crisis in values. By giving away food to people in need in public places, we directly dramatize the level of hunger in this country and the surplus of food being wasted.

We also call attention to the failures of this society to support those within it while funding the forces of war and violence, including the police. We are committed to the use of non-violent direct action to change society. It is by working today to create sustainable institutions that prefigure the kind of society we want to live in, and that build a vital and caring movement for progressive social change.

Food Not Bombs Hoboken
P.O.Box 713
Hoboken, NJ 07030
Foodnotbombs_hoboken@hotmail.com
Food Not Bombs believes that society and government should value human life over material wealth. Many of the problems in the world stem from this simple crisis in values. By giving away food to people in need in public places, we directly dramatize the level of hunger in this country and the surplus of food being wasted. We also call attention to the failures of this society to support those within it while funding the forces of war and violence, including the police. We are committed to the use of non-violent direct action to change society. It is by working today to create sustainable institutions that prefigure the kind of society we want to live in, and that build a vital and caring movement for progressive social change.
