Now I'm going to read you some statements about divorces in New York State. When I am done, please tell me which one you agree with more. [ROTATE STATEMENTS A & B FOR ALL THESE QUESTIONS]

Statement A: Some/Other people say that New York State's laws make divorces here far more difficult, expensive, and nasty than divorces in other states. They say New York's divorce laws make the lawyers who handle these cases very rich while forcing people to stay in bad and unhealthy marriages. These people also say New York needs to adopt no-fault divorce like every other state in the country.

Statement B: Some/Other people say that New York State's laws should keep it a little difficult to get a divorce. Otherwise, people will divorce too quickly and easily rather than work to save the marriage and that will lead to more divorces and more emotional damage and financial harm to children. These people point out that New York's current divorce laws help keep New York's divorce rate among the lowest in the nation.

Now I'm going to read you some statements about unions that represent government employees. When I am done, please tell me which one you agree with more. [ROTATE STATEMENTS]

Statement A: Some/Other people say that unions representing government employees make state and local government more expensive and inefficient. They say these unions demand lavish pensions for government employees that taxpayers just can't afford. They say these unions are just special interest groups that put their own interests above the public's, and they say the next governor should try to limit the power and influence of these unions.

Statement B: Some/Other people say that the unions representing government employees make state and local government more honest and fair in their dealings with employees and the general public. They say that these unions fight against budget cuts to schools, hospitals, and other essential services, and they say the next governor should work with these unions to protect government employees from laws that unfairly limit their rights to unionize.

HEALTH INSURANCE

Now I'm going to read you some statements about health insurance, which helps people pay doctors' bills and other medical expenses. When I am done, please tell me which one you agree with more. [ROTATE STATEMENTS]

Statement A: Some/Other people say that New York State should require people without health insurance to buy it and that the government should help people pay for health insurance if they can't afford it. They say that many uninsured people are young, healthy, and financially well-off, so their failure to buy health insurance forces the rest of us to pay more than our fair share of the high cost of caring for the sick.

Statement B: Some/Other people say that New York State should create a government-run health insurance program to replace private health insurance companies and provide health insurance to everyone. They say that private insurance companies drive up the cost of health care by acting as useless middleman between doctors and patients, and they say that people in other countries spend less money on health care while enjoying better health because they don't waste money on insurance companies.
