Assistant Professor, Program in Film and Screen Studies
Dyson College of Arts and Sciences
Pace University

The Film and Screen Studies program within the Dyson College of Arts and Sciences at Pace University invites applications for an anticipated faculty position at the Assistant Professor level (tenure track) to begin September 2016. The position is located at the University’s New York City campus in lower Manhattan. Film and Screen Studies is a fast growing interdisciplinary major that seeks additional faculty to both strengthen and expand the program core.

Applicants should have an earned Ph.D. or equivalent in the critical study of film and screen media. We are primarily interested in applicants whose expertise is in one or more of the following specific areas: African-American cinema/media histories and cultural formations; American cinema in a global context and/or global cinema in an American context; cinema and television; cinema and/as media convergence. The candidate must show a commitment to undergraduate education and will be expected to teach both introductory and advanced courses in the program, ranging from world film history to a senior seminar in film theory. In addition, the successful applicant will be expected to participate in the curricular and administrative development of Film and Screen Studies as an undergraduate research/scholarship program.

Submit cover letter, CV, teaching and research statements, along with contact information for three references, to Interfolio’s By Committee: apply.interfolio.com/32785. Review of applications will begin immediately and continue until the position is filled; applications received by December 10 are guaranteed consideration.

Pace University is an Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action employer. Minorities, women, veterans and individuals with disabilities are encouraged to apply.