Keynote Brief Bio:

Gyasi Ross is an author, speaker and storyteller. Gyasi comes from the Blackfeet Nation and resides on the Port Madison Indian Reservation near Seattle.

He is in demand as a speaker on race, social justice and white privilege as well as issues specifically affecting contemporary Native Americans and guests on MSNBC, ESPN, Democracy Now and radio shows nationwide.

Ross is the author of Don't Know Much About Indians (but I wrote a book about us anyways) (2011) and How to Say I Love You in Indian (2014).

Ross writes for the Huffington Post, Indian Country Today, and Deadspin and has released a spoken word/hip hop CD titled "Isskootsik (Before Here was Here)" on Cabin Games Records.
